

Carol Woolton

Biography:

Carol Woolton is a Jewellery Historian, Editor, Stylist and Jewellery Editor at British Vogue for twenty years where she remains as Contributing Editor. She was the first jewellery editor of Tatler Magazine and has contributed widely to magazines, newspapers and online supplements around the world including The Financial Times, Vanity Fair, Air Mail, American Vogue and the Daily Telegraph. She curates jewellery exhibitions she is the author of five books covering the broad spectrum of antique and historic jewels to contemporary styles. More recently, she explored a century of style in Vogue: The Jewellery and Ideas and inspiration for living with crystals in The New Stone Age. She is the founder of the podcast: If jewels could talk.